I am enclosing a letter that has been jointly written by the Haemophilia Centre and the Welsh Ambulance Service. As you can see in the letter it states that if you need to be taken to hospital then because of your bleeding disorder you will need to come to the University Hospital of Wales in Cardiff so that whatever your medical problem is, your bleeding disorder can be taken into account.

Some people have been finding it difficult to persuade ambulances to bring them to this hospital and hopefully this letter will make things easier in the future. If the ambulance staff think that you are unstable or in need of very urgent treatment they will still take you to your local hospital. If you have any questions related to this letter, please do not hesitate to bring it up at your next outpatients appointment or give us a ring.

Yours sincerely

To Ambulance Crew

The above named patient is registered with the Arthur Bloom Haemophilia Centre at the University Hospital of Wales due to a bleeding disorder. In the event of an injury or illness requiring an emergency 999 call and hospital attendance the above named patient must be brought to the Emergency Unit, University Hospital of Wales Cardiff unless immediate emergency resuscitation is required.

The haematology on call specialist registrar can then be contacted and assist with the treatment plan required.

Yours sincerely
