Subsequent to your memo regarding the forthcoming Washington Post article, I received the following information:

- There will be two letters in the The New England Journal of Medicine where the opinion is that AIDS is transmitted through cooled blood derivatives. The authors (unknown at this time) recommend returning to the use of cryo.
- There have been discussions within ARC as to whether or not they could cope with increased cryo usage.
- Two hemophiliacs on the Peninsula (SF, CA) have gone back to cryo due to the AIDS scare.
