Dear Gmy

Thank you for your letter of May 14th. I think your view that tooth extraction in wild haemophilias are best treated with D.P.A.V.P. or cryoprecipitate is a very valid one. What I meant to say, and on rereading my letter is not made clear, is that I would suggest a kind of NHS concentrate be made to cover and operation, where other concentrates such as commercial material would be indicated. Some occasion are bound to arise in these circumstances where concentrate is given to a patient who has not had previous concentrate. This is the only way we can tell at the moment if a product is idiosyncratic.

Kindest regards,

Yours sincerely,

GRO-C: Dr Craske
